The Women's Earth and Climate Action Network (WECAN) International will be on the ground in Marrakesh, Morocco with a WECAN Delegation this November and December for the 2016 United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) COP22 climate talks.

As a global network of women for climate justice, WECAN International is committed to bringing the voices of grassroots, frontline and Indigenous women community and Earth defenders into such spaces to share their struggles, experiences and solutions and to demonstrate resistance to false solutions to the climate crisis, while offering clear directives for a just and safe energy transition.

Building upon WECAN International's work done in conjunction with UNFCCC climate talks and negotiations since 2010, we will participate both within and outside of the UNFCCC climate conference to advocate for climate justice, gender equality, Indigenous rights, rights of nature and meaningful, bold action on climate change, with grassroots, Indigenous and frontline women leaders at the forefront of policy and decision making.
